Welcome to Issue 26, our Winter Issue of The Autism File. As you can see we have had a makeover: a completely new image with double the size!

I am so proud of

The Autism File team and all its contributors. And thanks to our new agreement with WH Smith, we now have a magazine dedicated to helping everyone in the world of autism, out there on the shelves, available to the public.

It hasn't been easy and I really can't thank our advertisers enough. Every single company that is advertising in this issue believes in us and wants to help the autism community. And for that, they deserve our utmost support.

The Autism File is a Voice for Autism and is a forum for all to use to speak, air and share experiences and challenge the matters that need examination.

We are very fortunate to have some highly experienced contributors featured in this edition and look forward to receiving a great many more articles, letters and advice in future. We have an objective, non biased editorial policy and will consider all contributions on their merit as we firmly believe that by all of us sharing our views and ideas we will become better educated, stronger and one step nearer to getting help for our wonderful children with autism.

There are so many fantastic organisations and charities involved in autism. Read, in this and future issues, about all the work they do; and how they are working hard to achieve their goals in helping our children.

Finally, please do contact us via email or phone if we can help further. We now have twenty five back issues that may contain the help you need. If they don't, then tell us your story because someone out there will be able to help you - that's how The Autism File works.

Tell your network about us: we are now in every WH Smith store across the UK; let's use our platform and raise the bar on the autism debate ...
